Subject: Letter of Recommendation

To Whom It May Concern,

As General Manager of Efipeek, I had the opportunity to oversee Alexis's work over the course of three years and to appreciate the quality of his contribution in his role as a PHP/Symfony developer, primarily on the Carter-Cash project.

During this period, Alexis worked on a high-traffic e-commerce platform built on Symfony and operated in a demanding production environment. His scope covered core backend challenges, including business logic, APIs, application reliability, and data processing, with contributions to components critical to the platform's day-to-day operations.

From a technical standpoint, what set him apart was not only the quality of his execution, but also his ability to step back and think critically about the subjects entrusted to him. When faced with complex or sensitive issues, he consistently anticipated impacts, identified areas of risk, and proposed solutions that were aligned with the project's constraints, both technically sound and relevant to real business needs. This analytical and solution-oriented approach, combined with rigorous execution, was a constant asset.

He also stood out for the quality of his interactions with the client. He never limited his role to implementation alone: he listened carefully to needs, articulated clear analyses, raised points of concern, and asked the right questions at the right time. His ability to bridge business expectations and technical realities was particularly valued.

I recommend Alexis without reservation for any PHP/Symfony backend developer role involving autonomy, strong analytical skills, and ownership of high-stakes subjects.

Kind regards,

SAS Efipeek
